LMU Mentoring: Support for young researchers

The LMU mentoring program is open to young scientists and scholars, whereby the program serves in particular to compensate for structural disadvantages and is therefore primarily aimed at groups of people who are under-represented in leading positions in science. This still applies to women, but also to persons from non-academic families with socialization in other academic contexts et cetera. An initial funding period of two years is planned, which can be extended by one year.

We offer close support and advice with targeted measures to strengthen the mentees on their way to a career in science through

- Intensive personal exchange;
- Workshops and coaching offers;
- Support for individual measures.
